

He currently works for the Connecticut Department of Transportation in the Division of Traffic Engineering.

Wiktor has experience in brownfields redevelopment, water quality assessment, environmental risk analysis, and GIS-based spatial analysis. His research includes studies on pedestrian and cyclist fatalities and Transit-Oriented Development policies applied to brownfield redevelopment.

He is committed to advancing environmental justice, reducing health disparities related to environmental exposures, and supporting resilient, equitable communities through collaborative approaches.